THE POPULATION OF TOPEKA.

THIS last page of the most complete directory in the world the publisher has set apart on which to briefly note what every citizen of Topeka should be proud of, and the State of Kansas should be congratulated on: that its capital city has passed through the last two years of general depression in all branches of industry and gained over three thousand inhabitants during that period. The most enterprising and sanguine real estate agent in our midst would not have possessed enough of that American element called cheek to have presented such figures to a credulous public; yet such are the facts; and let it be recorded that Topeka, on the first day of June, 1890, including its additions and suburbs, has a bona fide population of over forty-eight thousand inhabitants, and that within the corporate limits of the city there are thirty-eight thousand six hundred and twenty-seven souls.

During the two years last past Oklahoma Territory was opened for settlement, and Topeka, liberal in all things, supplied over three thousand of her inhabitants, of all shades, to fill the New Jerusalem. Through the "Gates Ajar" passed several thousand of Topeka's citizens, but most of them have returned to their first love. The four new States also received a quota of Topeka's migrating population, and the Mormon boom likewise attracted a number of wealth seekers from our midst; and with all this drain in two years' time, Topeka still presents a steady increase in her population and greater prosperity in her development than any other city in the State. In view of the fact that the official United States census is now being taken, there are some who will doubtless ignore these facts herein stated, and keep on doubting until the official count is heard from. These so-called statistics, because they are officially gathered by an act of Congress and a number of inexperienced political appointees, will be handed down and published for a decade in every geography, railroad guide and similar publications as correct and reliable, and supplant all facts and figures gathered by experienced and trained statisticians, simply because they are the result of official production. Whatever may be the result of Uncle Sam's enumeration of Topeka, the unofficial fact will remain, that it contains, and should have the credit for, a population indicated by the figures herein set forth.
